Payments Up in Oct. Social Sec. Checks

John M. Beale, Manager of the Lewiston Social Security office, does not believe that the job of increasing 4½ million social security payments will cause any delay in mailing the first checks at the new rates. The increase made law July 18, goes into effect for the month of September; checks for September are due about October 3. About 2200 Oxford County persons are entitled to the monthly payments because of retirement or death of the family breadwinner.

Practically every family represented will receive more money as a result of recent amendments to the social security law. However, the social Security Administration is already changing the amounts, and there is no need for anyone to make any kind of application to have them changed.

If the increase is due and does not show on the check arriving early in October, a later check will make up the difference," Beale added. For persons whose payments were figured on covered earnings beginning in 1937, a few samples illustrate the extent of the increase:

Retired Worker
Now Receiving	Will Get
$20.00 (minimum)	$25.00
40.00	45.00
60.00	65.00
68.50 (maximum)	77.10
Widow and One Child
30.00 (minimum)	37.00
60.00	67.50
90.00	101.40
128.84 (maximum)	115.80

Most of the benefits payable in the future will be based on earnings after 1950 instead of after 1936. The amended law provides a new formula for determining the amount of the payments in these cases. Under it, a retired worker's monthly benefit would be 55% of the first $100 of his average monthly earnings plus 15% of the remainder up to $300. Dependents and survivors will have increases in proportion to those for retired workers.

Beginning September 1, the new law increased to $15 a month instead of $10 the amount of money a beneficiary may earn and still receive the monthly benefits. Self-employed people entitled to old-age and survivors insurance benefits may receive the payments for each month of the year if their earnings during the entire year are not over $300.

The amended law contains a provision of special importance to self-employed people who originally applied for benefits in 1952. They may now have their 1952 earnings used in figuring their monthly benefit payments. In general, this will increase the monthly benefit payment when the employed person dies or retires in the present year.

A similar change in the law now permits insured wage earners who retire in 1952 to have their wages for this year used immediately in figuring the amount of their benefit payments. Heretofore, it was necessary for them to come back after the end of the year in order to have all of their covered wages for 1952 included in the computation of the benefit amount. The Social Security office informed a number of individuals to that effect. The change in the law of course cancels that information.

Another amendment allows beneficiaries, aged 75 or over already receiving checks to take advantage of the higher benefit payments provided under the new formula if they have had at least a year and a half of covered work after 1950.

The amended law allows social security wage credits of $160 for each month of active military or naval service after July 24, 1947. This provision applies to service in the armed forces up to January 1, 1954.

Of advantage to the survivors of deceased service people is a

PASTURE JUDGES HERE

The judges in the New England Green Pasture Program are judging Maine's best pastures this week. The three pastures already chosen for the Maine judges are the three best of those of Harold Bennett, of Bethel, Robert S. Pike, of Cornish, and Harold J. Shaw, of Sanford. Farmers in central and eastern Maine need not feel disappointed that the three state winners all live near the New Hampshire line. Really the weatherman favored them with more rainfall than he did farmers in most other sections of the State. The New England judges will place their pastures in one, two, three or four and also pick the New England winner.

The first Universalist Society was organized in 1843 with 13 members. In 1851 land for the church was given by Joseph Frye. Lumber was hauled and plans drawn by Ezra F. Beal of Norway. The church was dedicated on Feb. 21, 1853. On Aug. 28, 1918 it was deeded to the Universalist Church Convention of Maine by trust deed.

The Women Did It!

The Arkansas Democratic Party has a new leader and Arkansas women have found a new place in the sun. Francis Cherry, an East Arkansas chancery court judge, has just won the Democratic nomination for Governor in a voting turnout that broke all records, and it was the women of Arkansas who made his victory possible.

Political strategists of both parties have blandly announced that it's all over but the counting of the votes that their presidential candidates are dead mortal cinches. That is the traditional attitude of the professionals at this stage of the game and no one with any knowledge of American politics believes for a moment in the minority. For as Senator Lodge, a top Eisenhower man, has frankly said, the Eisenhower-Stevenson contest is strictly a horse race. Both parties will conduct about as known as a blind campaign that is campaigning in which they know the voters is very much in doubt, and it is necessary to painstakingly seek every possible vote.

It was inevitable that the first task undertaken by each candidate was to attempt to beat the other party schisms that were created at Chicago. General Eisenhower has commended at length with leading Taft backers, and seems to have won their willing support. Governor Stevenson has done the same thing with the embittered supporters of Kefauver, Russell and Macmillan. The top men know that, in both cases, a very high degree of party unity is the number 1 requirement.

It is universally believed that the two candidates will personally conduct high-level and very dignified campaigns, as political campaigns go. The slugging and the dirty fighting, if any, will occur at the lower levels. Judged by their backgrounds, careers, and characters, neither General Eisenhower nor Governor Stevenson from the sort who could lower themselves to ranting and name-calling. If this is true, it will certainly be an important service to national unity.

The Eisenhower campaign got started when the General spoke at the Veteran of Foreign Wars Encampment in Los Angeles. The General made an appealing talk, brief and sincere, in which he offered a ten-point program to create an America "closer to our hearts."

His points included: to increase America's spiritual, creative and material strength; to win a just and lasting peace; to build a prosperity not based on war; to protect the earnings of the people from taxes and inflation; and to insure that those who serve in government are Americans of loyalty and dedication. Such goals, he said, are all within our reach.

Learn to Face the Issue

ABOUT THIS TIME last year Miss Shirley Sargent, Westfield, New Jersey, was going crazy with worry. She was breaking in a new girl on her old job, learning a new one herself and doing half the work of another.

She was working during her noon hour, didn't take any rest, and going home after work she was worn out. But as she thought it over, she decided that the management wouldn't have given her all that work if they hadn't thought she could do it.

But one day when one of the men asked why she hadn't done some typing, she broke down and cried. She had been trying so hard and this was the last straw. She went to her boss and told him he could have his lousy job. That's just what she said, "You can have your lousy old job. I've worked overtime long enough. I'm through!"

Then they had a talk and she explained just what she had been doing and why she felt as she did. It seems that she was capable and could do it, they kept piling things on her without thinking.

Now when she is troubled she says she goes to her boss and says, "Why are you giving this to me?" They talk it over and get along fine—and she is happy.

Her policy now is to face an issue and straighten it out promptly.

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual — National and International Problems Inseparable From Local Welfare

Political strategists of both parties have blandly announced that it's all over but the counting of the votes that their presidential candidates are dead mortal cinches. That is the traditional attitude of the professionals at this stage of the game and no one with any knowledge of American politics believes for a moment in the minority. For as Senator Lodge, a top Eisenhower man, has frankly said, the Eisenhower-Stevenson contest is strictly a horse race. Both parties will conduct about as known as a blind campaign that is campaigning in which they know the voters is very much in doubt, and it is necessary to painstakingly seek every possible vote.

It was inevitable that the first task undertaken by each candidate was to attempt to beat the other party schisms that were created at Chicago. General Eisenhower has commended at length with leading Taft backers, and seems to have won their willing support. Governor Stevenson has done the same thing with the embittered supporters of Kefauver, Russell and Macmillan. The top men know that, in both cases, a very high degree of party unity is the number 1 requirement.

It is universally believed that the two candidates will personally conduct high-level and very dignified campaigns, as political campaigns go. The slugging and the dirty fighting, if any, will occur at the lower levels. Judged by their backgrounds, careers, and characters, neither General Eisenhower nor Governor Stevenson from the sort who could lower themselves to ranting and name-calling. If this is true, it will certainly be an important service to national unity.

The Eisenhower campaign got started when the General spoke at the Veteran of Foreign Wars Encampment in Los Angeles. The General made an appealing talk, brief and sincere, in which he offered a ten-point program to create an America "closer to our hearts."

His points included: to increase America's spiritual, creative and material strength; to win a just and lasting peace; to build a prosperity not based on war; to protect the earnings of the people from taxes and inflation; and to insure that those who serve in government are Americans of loyalty and dedication. Such goals, he said, are all within our reach.

WHAT ABOUT the farm vote this year? That is the big question which is paramount in both political parties. With farm income barely keeping ahead of prices, the politics of both parties are important to the farmers of the nation.

The most of the Republican platform is "We favor a farm program aimed at full parity prices for all farm products in the market place. . . . Where government action on perishable commodities is desirable, we recommend locally controlled marketing agreements and other voluntary methods."

The rest of the Democratic platform says "We will continue to protect the producers of basic agricultural commodities under the terms of a mandatory price support program of 90 percent of parity. We continue to advocate practical methods for extending price supports to other staples and to the producers of perishable commodities which account for three-fourths of all farm income."

In other words, the Republicans favor a flexible program of price support in the market place which means the law of supply and demand and local action of a voluntary nature on perishables.

The Democrats favor mandatory 90 percent of parity for all basic and extension of these mandatory supports to perishables when necessary. The kind congress in the last days of the session became so alarmed at the combined fall of farm income that a bipartisan committee of both Democrats and Republicans looked out the provisions of the 1949 law, which calls for a sliding scale of parity support for a compulsory 90 percent of parity through 1954.

It would seem therefore that the Republicans in the 1952 platform are taking back on the 1949 law, while the Democrats approve the bipartisan action of the kind congress for the full protection of the farmer. The country can expect during the next few months an anxious effort spread.

AN ESSAY entitled "What The Weekly Newspaper Means To Me," written by a Walden, New York, high school girl, is worthy of editorial space in the nation's weeklies.

Here it is, in part: "Biographies by the thousand adorn the shelves of our school and public libraries. Yet, unassuming, week after week a biography is related to us in installments. A weekly newspaper is to me the life story of a community recorded in 52 episodes each year. It is a factor which unites through common interest and without bigotry each and every reader. The facts disclosed in these journals may not be world-shaking, dynamic or sensational, but they are filled with the very essence of community life—births, deaths, and down-to-earth friendly chatter.

"Thus to me, the weekly paper is a strong line which joins me to my fellow men. Its enlightening influence, truly the life blood of our community, makes me aware and appreciative of my neighbors. In accidents, disasters and personal crises we are alerted, noticed, and remedied. Praisedworthy achievements receiving publicity in newspaper often culminate in a repeat performance.

"... Our weekly would have little appeal outside our community, but in our locale the publishing date of our paper (and I mean our paper) is heralded with an air of pleasant anticipation. . . .

"What does my newspaper mean to me? In order to fully appreciate the value . . . I imagine my life and the life of our community without its steady influence. We would be thrust into the very depths of ignorance, and a locality where these conditions would breed intolerance, bigotry, and . . .

Justice Hits a Lick

From The Enid Star Tribune, Enid, Oklahoma.

When a Whiteville, N. C., judge sentenced the leader of a mob-rider gang to four years in prison for his part in a series of kidnappings, the law took a healthy swing at one of the most dangerous and lawless groups in America.

In addition to sentencing Thomas L. Hamilton, a squatty expert, to four years, the North Carolina judge handed some of the same to sixty-two of his cohorts.

As usual, the Ku Klux Klan in that area was dedicated to the cause and anarchy with the final results that citizens of the counties spent nights of terror in haggard and night raids occurred month after month in the area.

The story was the same as had been written in Alabama and the southern states in recent years, and the action of the judge's jury should prove the proper dose just as it did in Alabama and Georgia not too long back.

ADLAI STEVENSON is a fine speaker and it "listens wonderful" when he says in speaking of the Republican convention, "The only idea they found was that the great decades of progress and peace, victory and war, bold leadership in this anxious hour were the misbegotten spawn of bungling, corruption, socialism, mismanagement, waste and worse."

Were the agreements which our New and Fair Deal Presidents made at Yalta and Potsdam, with a government which a schoolchild knew to be crooked, "bungling"? Was taking the advice of our far eastern "experts" as regards China "bungling"? Was it "bungling" to announce that Korea was outside our area of defense, thus practically inviting invasion by the North Koreans? Were the milk coat and deep freeze affairs indicative of "corruption"? Will anyone deny that fulfillment of the purposes of the Fair Deal would mean "socialism"? Is it "mismanagement" if one President in six years spends more in peacetime than all our other Presidents combined? And unless all the reports of careless handling of government business, then surely waste has run riot for many years. The New and Fair deals have certainly left the old Democratic party some questionable legacies!

It is sometimes clever political strategy to "lead from weakness." The government has opened his attack just where the New Deal is most subject to criticism and has beat the Republicans to the start. This may be the Democrats' general approach, as they have already started to blame the Republicans for New Deal errors.

Before they get through, we may find that the Republicans started the first and second world wars and the Korean mess; that Teheran, Yalta and Potsdam were Republican mistakes, and that Lattimore is going to be Eisenhower's secretary of state if the general is elected. Well, you can convince the public of most anything if you talk long and loud enough, but the Demos have got themselves a tough job this time.

GRASS ROOTS OPINION

Alma, Mich., Journal: "There are the great principles which are derived from religion, two pillars which rest American freedom; the sovereignty of God in the stream of history and the sacredness of the individual. And right here it becomes pertinent to repeat the old biblical admonition: 'Remember, not the ancient landmarks, which thy fathers have set'."

Madame, N. C., Enterprise: "On the average American's income begins to shrink... he looks for a way to cut expenses. But not in Washington. Every time Congress suggests a small appropriation for any purpose, a bureaucratic 'tax and spend' is still a popular song on the Potomac."

40 Thousand Dead Foreseen If Bomb Hits Average City

IF YOU'RE reading your newspaper before breakfast you'd better wait until you've looked those eggs in the eyes before reading this—their cold, blank stare might horrify you. And at the same time you should thank your stars that you probably live in a small city not strategic or vital enough to repay the enemy in military gain for dropping an atom bomb upon it.

This is because the Federal Civil Defense Administration has come out with a statement weird enough to cause you in a sick moment to look upon your breakfast eggs as the yellow eyes of doom.

The FCDA declares that the average American city would have to bury 40,000 dead within two days after one atomic bomb dropped upon it.

This estimate of thousands of corpses littering the streets after an air attack sounds grim even to federal directors. The FCDA and city authorities are studying the problems and details of such a gruesome possibility.

There probably would be olive drab plastic sheets in which to wrap bodies. To obtain 40,000 caskets of wood or any other material would be impossible immediately.

Military men look for an atomic attack at once if an enemy makes war against this country. Air Force Chief of Staff General Hoyt H. Vandenberg says 70 per cent of any raiding force of planes probably will get past U.S. air defenses.

The dead of an air attack would have to be disposed of 48 hours after death unless the city were in a cold or dry climate to prevent their being a health hazard. Such wholesale embalming would be out of the question. The dead would be left to rot in the streets.

To permit survivors to file past the unidentified dead in hope of spotting their missing relatives would be impracticable. If 40,000 bodies were laid out in two rows, the aisle between them would be 20 miles long.

God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. (Psalm 46:1) Read Philippians 2:12-18.

YESTERDAY ago a party of travelers ascending the steep slopes of the Matterhorn, found themselves suddenly imperiled by a great gust of wind, as they rounded a shoulder of the mountain. Their guide quickly shouted back, "Get down on your knees!" He was the voice of experience, for he had traveled those steep and slippery mountain paths during many a year. He knew the only way of safety.

That is like life. Storms sweep down upon us unexpectedly and threaten us with spiritual disaster. Temptations, sorrows, misfortunes, fears, defeats, find us unable to meet them successfully. The stress and strains of life often overwhelm us, for in our own strength we are unable to overcome. It is at such times that the guide's words, "Get down on your knees," have special meaning for us. We need God's help and guidance. The centuries have proved that we travel life's pathway most safely on our knees.

Prayer

We pray Thee, O God, that in the hour of emergency Thou wilt keep us safe. Through all life's experiences, whether of joy or sorrow, may we consciously seek Thy divine guidance. Be Thou daily our Companion. We pray in the name of Christ, our Saviour, who went about doing good. Amen.
